FIFTY-EIGHTH YEAR

NO. 26

CEDARVILLE, OHIO, FRIDAY MAY 31, 1935

PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR

NEWS LETTER FROM STATE DEPARTMENTS

COLUMBUS.—The state tax commission warned last week that it will revoke the licenses of vendors under the sales tax regulation unless they file the required initial sales tax information by June 1. The commission stated that only a small percentage of the 235,000 licensed vendors have filed the necessary data to date. No extension of time will be given unless a vendor makes a written request to the commission for delay and shows a good reason why an extension should be granted, it was said. Sales tax collections in the first four months' operation of the sales tax law have netted the state $14,458,000, State Treasurer Harry S. Day reported.

The sixth annual advanced training course for officials of Ohio fire departments will be staged at Ohio State university from September 10 to 13 under auspices of the university and the Ohio Inspection Bureau, it was announced by State Fire Marshal Frank G. Henry. In addition to the regular annual school three regional meetings were scheduled this year. The first was to be conducted May 29, 30 and 31 at Middletown, the second will be held June 11 and 12 at Akron and the third July 12 and 13 at Lyndhurst. New and improved methods of fire fighting, technical matters and resuscitation of victims of smoke and gas will be discussed at the sessions. Prof. K. W. Stinson of the university's mechanical engineering department will preside at the district schools and R. B. Criswell of the Ohio Inspection Bureau will give instruction on fire department drills.

There will be an increase of four state senators and three members of the House of Representatives in Ohio's 92nd General Assembly, which will be elected next year, according to George M. Neffner, statistician in the office of Secretary of State George S. Myers. The increase will bring the total membership of the senate to 36, and that of the house to 138. The membership increases are due to the population functions certain counties have in excess of the legislative apportionment ratios and are authorized by the constitution. Four state senatorial districts, each now represented by a single senator, will elect two to the 92nd assembly, and Belmont, Mahoning and Franklin counties will each get one more house member than they have at the present time. The senatorial districts which will elect an additional senator are the 3rd, comprising Montgomery and Erie counties; the 17th, 18th, 19th, and 28th, comprising Knox, Morrow, Holmes, Wayne, Coshocton, Tuscarawas, Guernsey, and parts of Monroe and Noble counties; the 20th and 22d, comprising Belmont, Harrison, Jefferson and Columbiana counties; the 30th and 33d, comprising Wood, Putnam, Henry, Hancock, Fulton, Sandusky, Ottawa, Huron and Erie counties.

A new proposed method of combating bootlegging in Ohio is being considered by the state liquor board, it was announced by Chairman Wellington T. Leonard. The plan will permit key liquor stores in certain cities to open at 4 a. m. and to close at 12 midnight. Until now the stores were open from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. The cities in which the new plan may be put in operation are Cleveland, Toledo, Cincinnati, Columbus, Dayton, Akron and Youngstown, where the greatest amount of bootlegging is said to take place. The board last week issued an order that all liquor agencies must close at midnight. Previously they were permitted to sell liquor as late as the individual proprietor cared to keep his place of business open.

Approximately 200,000 employables on Ohio relief rolls will be put to work under the federal government's $4,000,000 work program, it was estimated by C. C. Stillman, federal relief administrator for Ohio. There were 2,225 relief work projects, involving an expenditure of $30,000,000 awaiting final approval at Washington, Mr. Stillman said. Of the 1,200,000 Ohioans on relief, 341,000 are employables and of the total about 50,000 are working for the FERA at the present time.

The state's death rate showed a slight increase in January and February of this year in comparison with the corresponding two months in 1934, according to figures compiled by Dr. Walter H. Hartung, director of the state department of health. There were 14,132 deaths in Ohio during the first two months of 1935, with a rate of 19.14 per 1,000 population, as compared to 13,649 for the same period in 1934, with a death rate of 18.98 per 1,000 population, Dr. Hartung said.

SACRILEGE

Decoration Day, it Duce Roosevelt, placed a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery, supposedly in remembrance of those World War veterans that fell in the bloody trenches in France. After what it Duce had to say just last week in his veto message and his slighting reference to those veterans that survived the terrible ordeal, his visit to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier lacks sincerity. What Sacrilege!

Here Is What NRA Was To Industry

Thousands of citizens never knew just how NRA was being used by big business to oppress small business, regardless of what "Gaa Bag" Johnson, Wall street messenger boy, claims in his double roll of pleading for continuance of a system that soon was to wipe out all small business. To use a local illustration, we will refer to the manufacture of paper because of the importance of the industry to this community. Under the regimentation plan of NRA companies that owned one or more mills closed down such plants as was necessary to keep others in operation. Other companies that owned but one plant leased closed down plants, many of them obsolete, that the owners of that plant could be credited to the one in operation, thus giving the latter plant more days of operation. Under the code all mills were listed as to tonnage and limited as to production, no matter how many orders were on hand. When a certain tonnage had been reached all small companies could do was to close down the plant. The larger companies with surplus of plants, owned or under lease, continued to operate seven days a week, thus being able to get the unfinished orders of small plants that had been forced to close down under the NRA tonnage code. Early in the code formation a plan had been worked out that did not reach conclusion that provided a method of forcing the independent mills to close down or be subject to lease or sale, under a "yellow dog" contract. The code enforcement was entirely in the hands of the owners of the large mills, independent mills having little to say, and without much chance for defending themselves. This is but one of the few things small industry has faced under the Roosevelt anarchistic system of Russian regimentation of business.

Tenant House Burns On Flatter Farm

The small tenant house on the Leonard Flatter farm near Clifton burned about six o'clock, Monday evening. Fire started in the kitchen while the family was preparing for supper. The alarm brought neighbors to the scene and most all contents were removed other than a few pieces in the kitchen. A family by the name of Luther Breakall, who moved there but a short time ago, occupied the home. The house was insured and will be rebuilt at once.

LETTER TO EDITOR

May 21, 1935

To The Editor:—While endeavoring to recall some of my experiences in Cedarville which might make an interesting story, it occurred to me that my father should be able to write some stories about things which happened in and around Cedarville when he was a boy, which would be much more interesting than any I could recall. So I approached him on the subject and after a little thought he concluded that the time Abraham Lincoln passed through in 1831 on his way from Springfield, Ill., to Washington, D. C., to be inaugurated President of the United States, was probably the most momentous occurrence of his early life in the vicinity of Cedarville. He was 16 years old at that time and joined some two or three hundred others at the railroad station to get a look at the homely rail-splitter who, with his wholesome psychology and humor, had talked himself into the presidency. Among those present was "Jake" Alexander who was the proud possessor of a white plug hat, which was sort of an emblem of the Republican Party in those days and was very much in evidence at their political rallies and parades. Mr. Alexander placed the hat on the end of a rail and raised it above the crowd so that Mr. Lincoln could see that there was at least one loyal Republican in Cedarville.

The train did not stop but moved through town very slowly, about four or five miles per hour. Mr. Lincoln came out onto the back platform and although he did not speak, he smilingly raised his hat and bowed as gracefully as he could. This endearing gesture must have made a profound impression upon those present, for after the train had moved on and the crowd was dispersing, "Old Billy" Kyle, who was one of the few Democrats of the community, was heard to say as he walked up the street, "Well I didn't vote for that man and I didn't want to see him elected, but I must say that he made his manners as nice as anybody could."

Mr. Kyle, a man of seventy at that time, lived in the residence which was afterwards occupied for many years by "Sam" Kildow. Had he been a younger man, no doubt, he too would have answered the call for volunteers to defend the union, which Lincoln sounded within a few weeks after his inauguration, for the country was caught in the throes of civil war. Many of those who stood that day and watched this backwoodsman "make his manners" on the rear platform of the train, did answer his call and served him as his commander-in-chief for four long years of strife. Mr. Kyle's nephew answered and gave an arm to the cause.

Two years later my father, although he had not yet reached the minimum age requirements for a full-fledged sailor, he misrepresented his age and joined the Union Navy. He was assigned to the Mississippi Squadron and for the two remaining years of the war patrolled the Ohio, the Mississippi, the Tennessee, the Cumberland and the Red Rivers. Even boys twelve years of age were accepted in the navy but were not full-fledged sailors of course. They were called "powder monkeys" and their duties were to carry powder from the magazines to the guns when the boats were in action. At other times they acted as messengers for carrying orders and performed other menial services.

At the time Lincoln paid his short

Dr. McChesney Speaks At Union Program

"Why We Should Remember Our Soldier Dead" was the theme of an inspiring address delivered by Dr. W. R. McChesney, president of Cedarville College, at pre-Memorial Day union services of Xenia churches at the Second U. P. Church Sunday evening. Dr. McChesney reviewed a history of the wars in which United States has participated, showing that in every war this nation was on the side of justice. He closed his address with an appeal for universal peace. Dr. H. B. McBire presided and Dr. J. R. Fields, of the First M. E. Church, read the Scripture lesson, Rev. W. L. Bright, of the First Lutheran Church, and Dr. W. H. Trilford, of the Presbyterian Church, led in prayer. The Session U. P. Church sang two patriotic anthems. Impressive memorial services were conducted at the O. S. and S. O. Home Chapel Sunday morning. Dr. McChesney delivered the principal address and music was furnished by the girls choir. Dr. B. R. McClellan, chaplain of Joseph P. Foody Post American Legion, delivered the invocation and also read, "In Memoriam." Mrs. Paul McFarland, Xenia, sang a solo and Rev. C. C. Hankins, Home chaplain, pronounced the benediction.

Says Solicitors Not Authorized

President W. R. McChesney of Cedarville College branded Monday as impostors members of a group of young men who, representing themselves to be students of the college, have been soliciting magazine subscriptions from residents of Greene and adjacent counties. President McChesney said he was informed the youths, numbering seven or eight have been attempting to ask subscriptions to the Pictorial Review, with college approval. Their activities are wholly unauthorized by the college, Dr. McChesney said.

312 FORECLOSURE SUITS

The HOLC has brought 312 foreclosure suits in Ohio against property with government loans. Had a bank brought that many suits the government would have advised the owners to take bankruptcy, or do anything to check action. If nothing else the bank would have been held up to public ridicule in the name of the "forgotten man."

Brigham tied for second in the high jump at 5 feet, 8 3/4 inches and won the 120 yard high hurdles in 18 seconds setting new conference record. McCormick took second in the mile run losing by only a few feet.

Entering three events and winning two seconds and a first is quite an enviable record. It is hoped that this start will lead to greater interest next year.

Dr. F. A. Jurkat has returned from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he attended a meeting of the Synod.

Dr. W. R. McChesney attended the meeting of the General Assembly two days this week.

The following students have had to withdraw from school because of illness: Miss Helen Haines, Xenia, Ohio; Miss Mildred Labig, Vandalia, Ohio; and Miss Virginia Wilson, Flatbush, Ohio. We wish for them a speedy recovery to health.

Cedarville College won over Bluffton 3-1 on Cedarville's baseball diamond Monday evening.

College was dismissed Thursday in honor of the sacrifices and spirit of our soldier dead. It is well to pause once a year to take thought of the things of the spirit.

NEW DEAL IS DEAD LETTER SAYS COURT

When the United States Supreme Court by a unanimous decision killed three of the important New Deal laws by declaring them unconstitutional, Monday, the Roosevelt administration faced a challenge to return to constitutional government.

The National Recovery Act which regimented industry and commerce by a system of codes approved by the President is nothing more than a scrap of paper. More than 700 codes became illegal at the reading of the decision Monday and from that time on have no standing in any court.

The code case was that of a poultry firm in New York city that had been indicted on 18 charges by the government. Charges of unfair competition along with illegal selling of poultry not in conformity with the code was the basis on which the case was decided. The code provided that the dealer must sell chickens by the coop and the customer had no choice of selecting coops, the code demanding they be sold as they come. If a coop was in the first ten a customer wanted that had two sick undernourished chickens, the customer was forced to take the sick birds or none at all. If the dealer permitted sorting, he was violating the code. The high court held that the code requirements if followed by a dealer would make him liable under pure food laws both of New York state and the city. Consequently the NRA collapsed by the decision.

The second important slap at the Roosevelt administration was holding the Federal Land Bank five year mortgage farm act unconstitutional. The court held it was taking property without due process of law. The enactment of this law did more to burden Building and Loan Associations than the depression itself. Thousands who held mortgaged farms refused to pay on their debt or even interest or taxes. Federal Farm Banks and other financial institutions suffered as well as insurance companies or individuals that had loans outstanding on mortgaged property.

The third important decision was relative to the removal of a member of the Federal Trade Commission by President Roosevelt, a few weeks after his inauguration. The court held the President was powerless to remove such an appointee without filing charges and presentation of supporting evidence. The ousted member died some months ago and his estate sued for salary due. The court ordered the government to pay back salary up to the time of his death.

Scores of other New Deal laws are in the balance and probably ineffective now due to the death of NRA. The AAA regulation and expenditures are now held without law and the collection of processing taxes will probably be checked by court action. One ground named is that Congress delegated to Roosevelt and other powers not possible under the constitution. Another is that the processing taxes on grains and meats do not all go to producers as originally intended. The government has been paying only about 50 per cent of the processing taxes to farmers while 35 per cent went for government operation other than what the AAA provided. By this it can be seen that even producers of cotton, wheat, corn, pork, etc., have not been getting all that was due them, while consumers were called upon to pay the tax supposedly to relieve agriculture.

It is plain in reading the decision on the NRA case that license of industry, commerce and even agriculture products is not possible under the constitution. The decisions were read by Chief Justice Hughes, Republican conservative and Justice Louis Brandies, liberal Democrat appointed by Woodrow Wilson. All decisions were unanimous by the nine judges.

FATHER AND SON BANQUET

One of the delightful events of the community was the "Father and Son" banquet given by the Ladies' Aid of the U. P. Church, Tuesday evening. About eighty were present.

The program preceding the feast: ad speaker, Hon. Stewart L. Tatum, Springfield, was a piano solo by Eugene Corry, a reading by Justin Hartman, and several vocal solos by Arthur Duffey, South Charleston. Robert Confar, cartoonist entertained with his art.

The address of welcome was given by Mr. Emile Finney and the response by Prof. A. J. Hostetter. Rev. E. A. Jamieson, who presided as toastmaster introduced Mr. Tatum, who told in a very interesting and descriptive manner of his trip up the Amazon by air.

Mr. Tatum has a wonderful descriptive narrative of what he experienced in travel among the various peoples, his trip into the jungle and the word picture of the great river was a treat to all who heard it.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS of COMMUNITY SERVICE

June 1, 1935, The Xenia National Bank Will Be One Hundred Years Old As An Organization

June 1, 1835, The Bank of Xenia, a privately operated bank, opened its doors for business. In 1846 it received a charter under the name of The Xenia Branch of the Ohio State Bank. When the national banking act was passed in 1862 The Xenia State Bank was chartered by The National government under the name of The First National Bank of Xenia, and in 1883 was granted a new charter under the name of The Xenia National Bank.

The record of The Xenia National Bank bears witness that it has taken helpful and constructive parts in the solving of the financial problems of the community during times of stress. Today we are carrying on in this traditional manner and lending every effort to assist in bringing the community through trying times in good order. We trust that when the present chapter of our country's history shall have been written our successors may look back with a feeling of pride upon the record of The Xenia National Bank during these uncertain years.

It is the earnest endeavor of the management of The Xenia National Bank to give to the public all the banking facilities which may be had in any city. Recently the interior of the banking house has been remodeled and equipped with bandit resisting fixtures—bullet-proof glass and screens, electrically controlled time locks and bandit proof tellers windows. An after-hour depository has been installed for the convenience of all wishing a safe place to deposit cash and checks after banking hours.

Saturday, June 1, our One Hundredth anniversary, we invite you to come in and see our newly and modernly equipped banking house.

Looking forward with confidence every director, officer and employee of this bank pledges to the community his whole-hearted cooperation in making this community a good place to live in as well as a good place to make a living in.
